

The Ceres Roadmap for Sustainability* is a resource to help companies re-engineer themselves for success in a world beset with unprecedented environmental and social challenges that threaten the economy and local communities. It is designed to guide companies toward corporate sustainability leadership, and ultimately support an accelerated transition toward a more sustainable global economy.

The Ceres Roadmap* contains 20 specific expectations for corporate sustainability leadership, broadly divided into four areas of activity— governance, stakeholder engagement, disclosure and performance.

Released in February 2018, Turning Point is Ceres' third assessment of corporate progress against key expectations of The Ceres Roadmap for Sustainability. Using data provided by Vigeo Eiris, the interactive report offers valuable insight for companies, investors and advocates into how more than 600 of the largest publicly traded companies in the United States are positioned to address critical sustainability issues.

We've Updated The Ceres Roadmap

As we pass the halfway point on the road to 2020, we took stock of our changing world and refreshed the expectations to reflect global sustainability trends.

"The Ceres Roadmap is a really helpful framework that provides an opportunity for management to think holistically about what their opportunities and risks are around sustainability."

Curtis Ravenel

Bloomberg Global Head of Sustainability Initiatives
